

Sinclair Broadcastings planned airing of "Stolen Honor" just days before the Presidential election is a blatant misuse of the public airwaves that they are allowed to use free of charge. This programming in no way serves the public interest and is yet another obvious means for the private interests of large companies to be served. Just another loophole for additional (and undoubtedly excessive) contributions to the Republican political machine! They should be required to air a documentary such as 'Going Upriver' to counterbalance and address issues raised in "Stolen Honor".

This type of one-sided programming is much more offensive to me than any half-time show at the Super Bowl could ever be. Maybe they should be fined if this is allowed to be broadcast without providing an opposing view (or maybe take a closer look at their licensing renewal!)

Thank you for your time, Janice Randles
